Michelle Loch Leading Humans

Leaders lead humans, so it makes sense that your leadership and team development must be based on what we are learning about the human brain, and how humans are motivated to perform.

We have learned more about the human brain in the last 25 years than in all of history, and this new science is providing us with new and more effective ways to get the best performance from our people and to understand and adjust our approach to selling services to clients.

In this seminar we will draw on the relatively new discipline of neuroleadership which is focused on taking what we are learning about the human brain and applying it to how we Lead, Coach and Mentor effectively, creating collaborative and highly effective teams.

The seminar will include:

- Leading in a VUCA (Volatile, Uncertain, Complex and Ambiguous) world
- Why change is so hard?
- New skills that leaders need
- How humans are wired
- The limitations of the intelligent brain
- Using powerful conversation to inspire and influence
- Creating a highly functional and collaborative team
- How to lead in times of change
- What does this mean for you?
